

MRHS Curriculum Fair Communications

“You can speak well if your tongue can deliver the message of your heart.” –John Ford

What can Communications do for you?

- Teach you how to be a better communicator.
- Improve public speaking and presenting skills that can help in job interviews and many demanding careers.
- Impress others by delivering stellar presentations and speeches with the use of visual aids.
- Improve research and writing skills that go hand in hand with delivering speeches.
- Learn techniques to channel your fear of public speaking.

What types of projects will I do in Communications?

- Self-Analysis
- Multi-Media Presentations
- Impromptu Speeches
- Persuasive Speeches
- In-Class Debates
- Demonstration Speeches
- And More!

How does this class work?

- We spend the first quarter examining all aspects of communication and getting to know each other.
- Students prepare and deliver a variety of speeches and multi-media presentations.
- For each speech you are given time to complete the assignment in class.

Communications/Public Speaking

What do Dane Cook, Oprah Winfrey, President Obama, and Chelsea Handler all have in common? They are great speakers! Communications can help you be a great speaker too!

Types of Projects

- Self-Analysis
- Multi-Media Presentations
- Impromptu Speeches
- Persuasive Speeches
- In-Class Debates
- Demonstration Speeches
- And More!

Here's what this course can do for you:

- Teach you how to be a better communicator
- Improve public speaking and presenting skills that can help in job interviews and many demanding careers.
- Impress others by delivering stellar presentations and speeches with the use of visual aids.
- Improve research and writing skills that go hand in hand with delivering speeches.
- Learn techniques to channel your fear of public speaking.

This course is for the student who wishes to improve his/her ability to communicate in front of small and large groups. Emphasis will be placed on gaining confidence through learning about, organizing, and preparing various speeches and presentations.

Questions? See Ms. Borchers in C105 or email at elisabeth.borchers@dvusd.org